1. [] the Hungarian Government suspended all deliveries of reparations to the Yugoslav Government during June 1948. In view of the present political situation in Yugoslavia, they are unlikely to be resumed at present.

2. Some time in May 1948, a Yugoslav delegation arrived in Budapest to discuss certain technical matters in connection with reparations. After two days, it was found impossible to conclude this business. When the Yugoslavs requested from their government an extension of time, they were peremptorily ordered to return to Yugoslavia. As a result, it has not been possible to settle the question under discussion with the Hungarians.
